

RADNOR TRAIL HISTORICAL SIGNS

In 2011, two new historical signs were installed along the Radnor Trail to commemorate Philadelphia & Western Railway stations that once operated there. They are located at Old Sugartown Road and West Wayne Avenue.

These signs represent the second phase of our long-term project to create interpretive panels commemorating all of the stations that once stood along the trail. Their concrete foundations still stand beside the trail, but it's still hard to imagine that today's trail was once lined with railroad stations!

The signs are very durable and will last for many years, but they are expensive to fabricate. We need your help to further tell the history of this important part of Radnor's past. If you would like to give to this project, your name could be displayed on a future sign.

For more information, please visit www.radnorhistory.org/trailsigns

If you have questions, write to one of the addresses below, or to webmaster@radnorhistory.org

Tax-deductible contributions can be made payable to and mailed to either of the following organizations:

Radnor Historical Society
113 West Beech Tree Lane
Wayne, PA 19087

Radnor Conservancy
P.O. Box 48
Wayne, PA 19087

A P&W trolley stops to pick up passengers at West Wayne Station. One of the new 2011 signs has been erected on the site of the old platform.

RADNOR
HISTORICAL SOCIETY

